The University of Perpetual Help System Laguna through its Community Outreach Department (COD), strengthened its commitment to community empowerment and sustainable livelihood development through the implementation of the Perpetualite Training Program: Negosyo Tayo at Brgy. Sto. Niño, City of Biñan, Laguna.

The initiative was conducted in partnership with the College of International Hospitality Management (CIHM) and the College of Business and Accountancy (CBA), combining academic expertise and community service to provide participants with practical knowledge and skills that can help them establish small businesses and explore sustainable sources of income.

As part of the training, participants learned how to prepare kimchi and empanada, gaining hands-on experience in food preparation and potential food business opportunities. The activity aimed not only to introduce livelihood skills but also to encourage creativity, entrepreneurship, and self-reliance among community members.

Through the expertise of the participating colleges, the program connected classroom learning with real community needs. It also provided an opportunity for students and university personnel to share their knowledge and contribute to initiatives that promote economic empowerment and inclusive community development.

The initiative supports United Nations Sustainable Development Goal 8 (SDG 8): Decent Work and Economic Growth, by developing entrepreneurial skills and encouraging livelihood opportunities. It also contributes to SDG 11 (Sustainable Cities and Communities) by supporting community-based initiatives that promote resilience and sustainable development, and SDG 17 (Partnerships for the Goals) through collaboration among university departments and local community stakeholders.

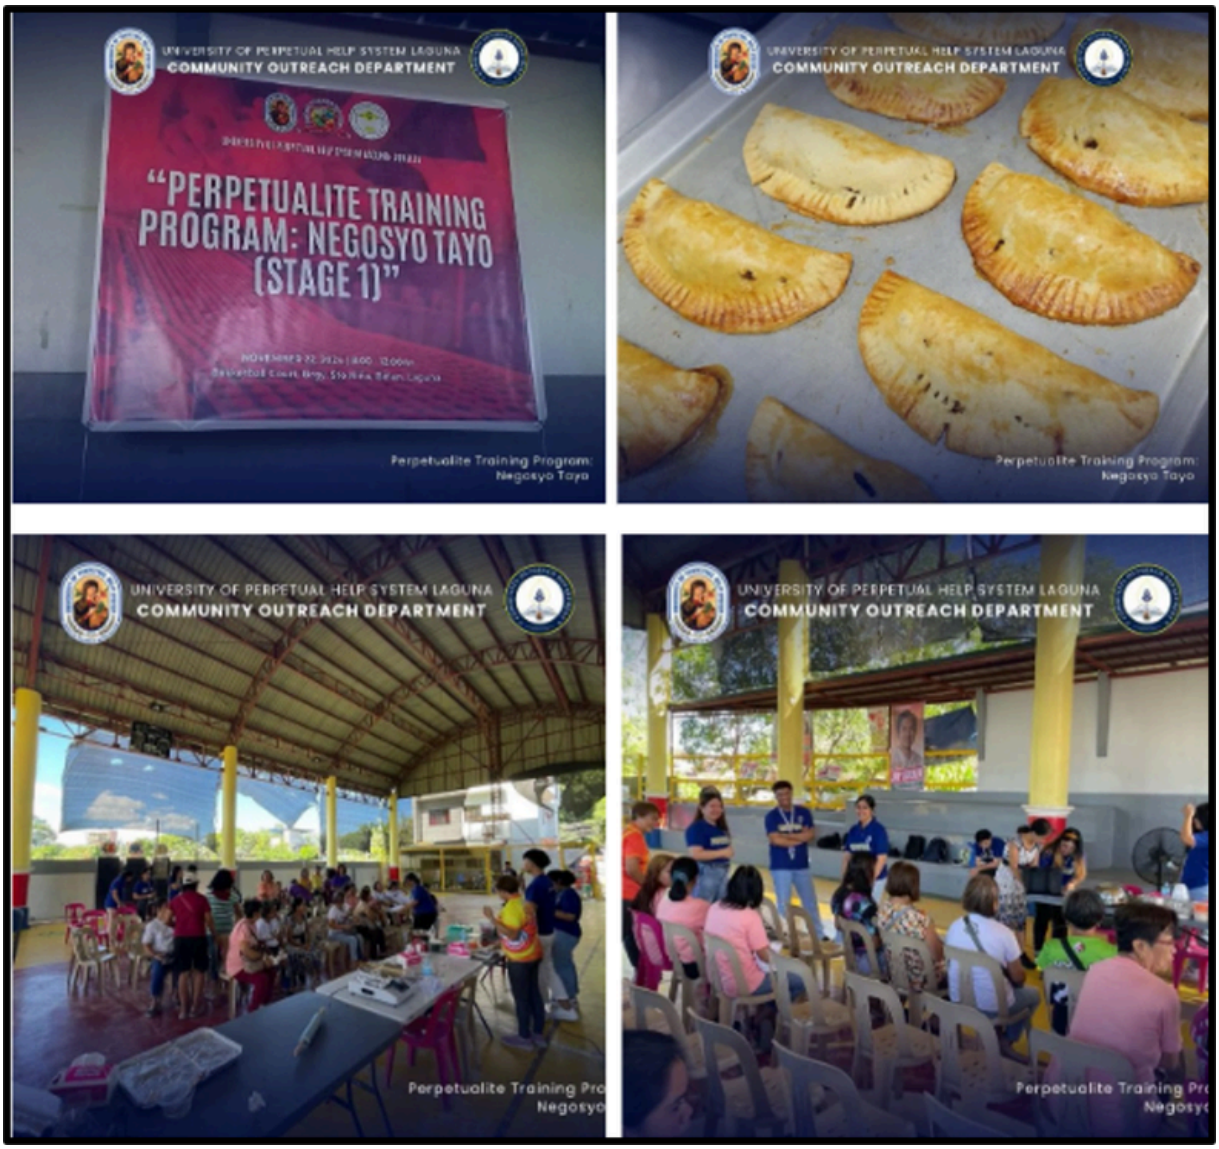

The successful implementation of the program reflects the collective efforts of COD, CIHM, and CBA in extending the University's academic resources beyond the campus and transforming knowledge into practical opportunities for community development.

Through programs such as Negosyo Tayo, UPHSL continues to demonstrate that education is not limited to academic instruction but also serves as a powerful instrument for improving lives, strengthening communities, and creating opportunities for economic independence.

Guided by its mission and core values, the University remains committed to being Helpers of God by empowering individuals, promoting self-sufficiency, and building communities where everyone has the opportunity to grow and prosper.
